HR POLICY & PROCEDURES HANDBOOK

[Company Name] — Internal Reference

Document ID: HR-POLICY-v1 | Owned by: HR Department Lead | Last reviewed: [date]

Section 1: Leave & Attendance

§1.1 Leave requests. Employees must submit planned leave through the employee portal before the leave begins whenever practical. The request must identify the leave dates and leave type.

§1.2 Leave balance. Employees may view their available leave balance through the employee portal. HR is responsible for resolving discrepancies between the displayed balance and the employee's official record.

§1.3 Unplanned absence. When an employee cannot attend work unexpectedly, they should notify their manager and follow the absence-reporting process as soon as reasonably possible. The absence must subsequently be recorded through the appropriate HR process.

§1.4 Attendance records. Attendance corrections require the employee to identify the affected date and reason for the correction. HR reviews disputed attendance records before changing the official record.

> Human Agent Notes — Section 1: HR L1 may explain leave and attendance procedures. Never disclose another employee's leave balance or attendance record.

Section 2: Onboarding & Employee Records

§2.1 New employee onboarding. HR creates the employee's official record before the employee's start date. Required onboarding documents must be completed through the designated employee process.

§2.2 Employee information changes. Employees must update changes to personal or employment information through the approved HR process. HR may request verification before changing sensitive records.

§2.3 Employment documents. Employment letters and official HR documents are available only to the employee concerned and authorized HR personnel. Requests for another employee's documents require appropriate authorization.

§2.4 Onboarding delays. When a new employee cannot access an expected company service, HR verifies the employee's start-date and employment information before routing the issue to the responsible technical department.

> Human Agent Notes — Section 2: Verify identity before discussing employee records. Do not disclose personal employee information to managers or coworkers without authorization.

Section 3: Benefits & Policies

§3.1 Benefits information. HR provides employees with information about eligibility, enrollment periods, and applicable benefit policies. Individual eligibility questions may require verification against the employee's HR record.

§3.2 Policy interpretation. HR provides policy guidance based on the current approved policy version. Where two policy versions conflict, the current approved version must be verified before answering.

§3.3 Sensitive HR matters. Sensitive employee relations, disciplinary, harassment, or personal employment matters must be handled through the appropriate confidential HR channel. The assistant should provide general procedural guidance and offer human escalation rather than requesting unnecessary sensitive details.

> Human Agent Notes — Section 3: Never expose confidential HR information. Sensitive cases require human handling.

Section 4: HR/Finance Disambiguation

§4.1 Compensation versus reimbursement. Salary, payroll, deductions, employment benefits, and employee compensation questions belong to HR/Payroll. Business expense reimbursement, travel claims, and vendor payments belong to Finance.

§4.2 Benefit versus expense. If the user is asking whether an employee benefit applies to them, route to HR. If the user is asking whether a business expense can be reimbursed, route to Finance.

> Human Agent Notes — Section 4: Ask: “Is this about your employment benefit/compensation, or about reimbursement for a business expense?”
